Hello Hulu!!

I am writing enthusiastically about my current application for the IT Services Tech 1 position. I am currently a teacher of computer science, specializing in coding, and data structures, but I also own my own technology support business. Whether it is teaching advanced coding algorithms, creating an application for a local server item or working on side projects, I am coding every day. As well, being in the position that I am, I am the point person for over 200 people in learning or using technology and developing practical solutions for both users and professionals alike.

What people usually see first in my resume is my teaching. And while I agree that certain topics in the field of education don't translate well to a working environment, I believe my role as the Computer Science chair stands as the exception. Day in and day out I am revising code, deep diving into algorithms, assisting and finding simplicity, reducing runtimes, and actively training the future engineers of tomorrow. Every day I get better and it has made me a better IT manager, leader and software developer. Just one phone call and I strongly believe you will see I am the right person for this position, or at least worthy of a chance. I look forward to getting that email or call. I won't be a waste of your time.

Thank you so much,

Javy Martinez
