- I built my first computer when I was 13 and have built 5 since
- I tinker with old hardware, including my current project, a dot matrix printer from 1991 that mostly works
- I've hosted video game servers and file servers on my Raspberry Pi
- I love cable management
- I can type 70-80 words per minute
- I'm at home on the command line, and prefer to use a terminal UI when I can

#=====#

- Critical thinking, time management, and stress resilience
At my gardening job I often had to solve complicated problems with no clear solution. Timing was important for essentially every task and I created my own daily schedule and adjusted it as unexpected tasks arose.
- Diagnostic skills
I currently use Linux, and it feels like every day something new goes wrong.
I've learned how to read technical documentation, search for relevant info on the internet, and break problems down into manageable parts.
- Customer service skills
As an Uber driver I often had to handle unruly customers. I learned how to encourage positive behavior from customers through my own actions, and how to converse with people I didn't know.
